HOARD DAIRY FARM IS A MODEL PLACE

ALLEN B. WEST OF HIGH SCHOOL FACULTY WRITES INTERESTING DESCRIPTION.

DISEASE IS PREVENTED

Cows Require Much More Heat Producing Food in Winter Than in Summer—Animals Are Kept Well.

As has been said in a previous article the thing that impressed one most as one entered the barn of W. D. Hoard, editor of Hoard's Dairyman, was the idea of comfort. Each individual cow of the entire herd seemed perfectly content with life. Now practically all of Mr. Hoard's cows are in the advanced registry, but it is hardly to be supposed that that is the reason for their evident contentment. It would be perhaps fairer to suppose that one reason why they are able to make the advanced registry is because of their contentment, which is based on their comfort, for that little word comfort is one of the keys to success in dairymaking.

Given good cows and good feed, the next thing to be considered is good care, and the best of good care is the comfort of the herd.

Now it would seem as if a man ought to give the animals dependent on his good care purely from a humanitarian standpoint, but perhaps this is too much to expect. However, if a dairyman does that he may be sure of his reward, this time in actual dollars and cents. That which adds to the comfort of the cow adds dollars to the milk check, and that which detracts from her comfort subtracts from the milk check.

Now what are some of the conditions of the clean barn conducive to comfort? The first thing one notes is that it is light, airy and clean. The average cow stable isn't a place where a fastidious person loves to linger, for its light is seldom more than twilight, it is difficult to escape the filth and of even a short stay one is likely to bear evidence in the "scent of the stable that hangs around him still."

Not so at Hoard's. The visitor may wander about the barn for an hour without unwillingly gathering evidence as to where he has been. The King system of ventilation is used, for its light is seldom more than twilight, it is difficult to escape the filth and of even a short stay one is likely to bear evidence in the "scent of the stable that hangs around him still."

The cleanliness of the barn is made possible by the proper construction of floors and mangers and stalls.

Mr. Hoard uses stalls of two kinds: the Ford Model stall and the James cow standstill. The first, the Ford Model stall, is a home made product and was originated by Mr. Hoard. A complete description of it and of other good home made stalls may be found in Wisconsin University bulletin No. 185, where the following points essential to be accomplished in cow stall construction are enumerated:

1. It should keep the cow clean.
2. It should make the cow comfortable.
3. It should be convenient for feeding, milking and cleaning.
4. It should be inexpensive.
5. It should hold the cow securely.

The old type of rigid stanchions may perhaps answer all these requirements but one—that of comfort for the dairyman to put himself in imagination in the place of his cow, but if he still keeps his cows in the rigid stanchions such an effort of imagination would be beneficial. Imagine being so placed that you were not able to reach any part of your body with your hands. Imagine, also, of being obliged to lie down without being able to change the position of your head! It wouldn't exactly make for comfort and peace of mind, would it?

Watch the cow which has been confined in that kind of a stanchion and see what she does on having her head released. She will not back out long before she begins to lick her ears. Sometimes she does it before she leaves the stall. She will keep her self cleaner in a stanchion where she can use her tongue in the way intended by nature for toilet purposes and is consequently in a position to assist the stable man in his care for her, for the up-to-date dairyman uses the cow's comb on his cows, for two purposes: to increase the cow's comfort and happiness of his cows, and the other to insure good conditions for the production of milk. Though the average dairyman cannot produce certified milk, who ever offers his milk for sale in any market is bound to use ordinary and decent precautions against filth.

Another important factor in the care of cows in winter time is that of maintaining a temperature at which the cow shall be comfortable. Since much of the food of the animal goes to the production of heat, without which it cannot carry on its vital processes, it follows that the cow requires more of the heat-producing food in winter than in summer. It is also true that upon a given amount of food less milk will be produced if the cow must use some of that food to maintain her body at the proper temperature. This account for the shrinkage in milk when the cows of the herd have been left out in the cold wind too long on wintry days. Some farmers do not turn their cows out at all in winter, but it is better to provide for them, if possible, a yard or open shed where, protected from the wind and warmed by the sun, they may exercise for a greater or less time each day, depending upon the severity of the weather. Unless, however, a suitable place is provided it is probably better to keep them within.

quired by cows to keep up proper temperature after drinking ice water. Again, cows will drink more water of a moderate temperature than of very cold, and since water forms such a large part of milk and it is forbidden by law to add it after milking, it is much better economy on the part of the dairyman to add it before milking by giving it to his cows in such amounts and at such temperature that the cows may drink as much as possible, being assured that the cow if a good one will add to it the required amount of other material, including butter fat.

Some dairymen have water in a tank in the barn, and the barn being warm, find it unnecessary to use the tank heater.

The dairyman to whom reference has been made in a previous article, who is getting an income of $100 per cow, exclusive of the cost of his feed, makes a practice of watering his cows three times a day, the last time being after milking at night, when he gives them all the water they will drink in a pail. Another, who has a long acquaintance has a tank in the barn and has recently begun this practice, and was much surprised to see how heartily the cows drank after milking.

Regularly in feeding and watering and milking cows also plays an important part in milk production, because it adds to the comfort of the cows. Most dairymen are reasonable, and they are their morning rounds, but too often other considerations tend to interfere with the "chores" at night. The only way to correct this is to set a time for milking and make the milk produced on that day the most valuable asset, as he can on many Rock county farms, it is only economy and good sense to let this take first rank in planning the work.

One of the most important things in reference to the care of the dairy herd has yet to be spoken of. One may have excellent equipment, furnish good feed and water at regular intervals, yet fail for the lack of another essential and that is cleanliness. The dairy cow is even more responsive to kindness than any other farm animal, and if a dairyman has which he regards as an ugly cow, which kicks or other the pail and acts so cantankerous as to spoil the milk of those caring for the herd, he would better dispose of her for beef, for one should not be in a bad temper when caring for dairy cows. The old advice to treat a cow as you would a lady holds good and pays in hard cash. Experiments have been made that show that not only does a cow produce less milk under harsh treatment, but the quality of the milk is changed.

It is a mistaken idea that the cow "holds up" her milk under these conditions; for the fact is not that she does not give down, but that she does not give up. The milk is in the mammary glands and does not secrete until the milker begins his work, and the success of that work depends upon the state of mind, or perhaps it is more scientific to say, the state of the nervous system. If a cow is comfortable and content, her glands will secrete the milk in a natural way and of the proper amount and quality.

The dairyman cannot afford to have about his barns at any time those who are blustering, brutal or ill-tempered. Keep your cows happy and they will increase your bank account.

Tooth Talks

Just before it is time for a child to partake of solid food, the temporary teeth begin to make an appearance, so the mother who is ready to break it up into small particles before it is swallowed. Previous to the time when the temporary or first set of teeth make their appearance the child's diet has been a liquid state before it can be absorbed and carried into the system to nourish the body. Nature, fully realizing this, has wisely given us a small set of teeth to be used in childhood and as we get larger and older this first set of teeth is shed and a larger one given us to be used all through the remainder of our lives. Not only are we given larger teeth, but we have twelve extra in number. This extra number is given us because as we grow larger we will need to grind up a much larger quantity of food than in our early life.

The first permanent tooth generally arrives at the sixth year and is often mistaken for a cavity, because the temporary teeth and neglected with serious results. Now, since it is part of nature's system that we are given teeth at a certain age they must be for a special purpose. Does one know of any purpose of them of more value than to chew our food to good digestion? Good digestion is the key to good health. The food we eat is of the greatest value to good digestion and proper nourishment. It is surely up to us to take the best care of our teeth, keeping them as clean as possible and preventing unnecessary decay and the pain caused by neglect. How can any one expect to thoroughly chew food with a lot of sore teeth or gums?

For the sake of appearance a perfect set of teeth is beautiful in itself, but it also gives beauty and symmetry to the entire face. An unclean mouth is not a thing of beauty, should it last forever. Every state is passing a various lot of laws but none as yet have been passed preventing the use of the tooth brush, so feel

ALBANY MAN CUTS WIFE WITH RAZOR THEN KILLS SELF

Tries to Kill His Wife, Then Ends His Own Life While Temporarily Deafened.

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.] Albany, Wis., Jan. 21.—Fred Burt, 40, of this village, ended his life this morning by slashing his throat from ear to ear with a razor after making an unsuccessful attempt to kill his wife first. Burt, who had been deafened by a blow on the head by the wife's brother, was aroused shortly after five this morning by the snoring of Mrs. Burt, who had been attacked by her husband while asleep in bed. The man, evidently crazed, had decided to end her life and then his own, and it was only after an awful struggle that the woman beat the insane man off, locked herself in a bedroom and later crawled through a window, reaching a neighbor's in an exhausted condition.

Tom Dolan, the village marshal, and Dr. Morgan, who had been summoned to care for the injured woman, went to the Burt home, approaching it with much caution, fearing some new act of the insane man. They entered by the same window Mrs. Burt escaped from and on investigation found Burt in an adjoining room with his throat cut from ear to ear. He was dead and his body lying in a pool of his own blood. That the man was insane is certain, as he was recently examined by a physician. Last July he had been examined by the county coroner, striking his head and had acted queerly ever since. He has been melancholy of late.

For many years he was employed as section foreman by the St. Paul and Northern Pacific, and was a member of the Albany Milling Company. He leaves a widow and two daughters, Mrs. Harry Ellis of Beloit and Mrs. Lela Alcock of Plattville. Mrs. Burt was a criminal, committing from her wounds and may not survive.

FULTON RESIDENT EXPLAINS MEETING

Takes Exception to Editorial in Gazette That Social Centers Are For Political Purposes.

In the issue of the Gazette for Friday last appeared an editorial that social centers were being organized throughout the state for the purpose of spreading political dogma. The newly organized social center at Fulton was cited as one of these, due to the fact that the Fulton Chamber of Commerce had been before the club and made an address on state taxes. The following letter from a member of the club takes exception to the editorial and is published below. While the statements made in its pages are doubtless true still the fact remains that throughout the state these social centers are being organized and lecturers, all primed with political propaganda, are sent to them and are delivering lectures in which the purpose of the present state administration is carefully woven into the talk. It is a widespread movement, not alone in Fulton, but throughout the entire state and cleverly concealed beneath the surface by the fact the social centers are organized by citizens for their own benefit, but the speakers are furnished by the state and their subject carefully prepared to pass the political matter in which they are so deeply interested.

The following is the letter relative to the Fulton affair:

Fulton, Jan. 19, 1914. Editor Janesville Gazette:

Dear Sir:—Relative to your editorial in last Friday's edition, I wish to state that the Fulton social center movement was very badly misrepresented. The club was organized without the aid of outside help and is wholly a local institution.

A committee was appointed at a recent church meeting to see what could be done to improve the social life of the community. The committee devised a plan to get all the people together at least twice a month. Our first meeting was held in the church at Fulton. True enough, Mr. Haugen gave us a talk, but not for the purpose indicated in your article. Tuesday evening, Jan. 13, we met in the Ladies' Hall for a supper and to organize and elect officers. After the business of the club was completed we enjoyed a social time for an hour or so.

We have called a meeting for Friday evening, Jan. 23, to be held in Ladies' Hall. Not once have we used the school house nor do we intend to. As to this being a political game, the Gazette's statement is way wrong.

Tommy Gavigan, an American fighter scrapping in Paris, has had a deal of hard luck. Gavigan together with a number of other American fighters went to France thinking to pick up some easy change upon hearing that American boxers drew big houses there. Most of the fighters returned shortly after their arrival, finding that after a number of fake bouts prize fighting had come into a little disesteem in the French capital. Gavigan, however, stuck it out rather than leave the gay city, and now somewhat regrets it. In a recent bout he was fined $150 for being two pounds overweight and then he lost the bout and his loser's share amounted to $135. Thus it cost him an even 12 beans for the pleasure and privilege of being licked. Gavigan is seriously considering a return to that dear U. S. A.

Larry McLean was given a $600 bonus by the St. Louis club—as per contract—for holding securely to the water wagon throughout the past season. It will be remembered that Larry was transferred to the Giants toward the end of the last season and at that time the St. Louis people tried to shove the responsibility of the bonus over into the New York hands. The matter was discussed at the meeting of the National commission in Cincinnati, however, and it was agreed that St. Louis must carry out their promise. Larry has appeared in vogue at nice prices, but it is doubtful whether he worked as hard for a similar sum before.

RACINE POLO TEAM PLAYS HERE FRIDAY

Reichert's All Stars to Oppose Moose Five at Janesville Auditorium.

After a period of inactivity of over a month the Moose polo team will endeavor to hold its undefeated record of this season against the strong Racine team led by Fritz Reichert. Janesville trimmed the Racine five in the first game of the season, and Reichert's men have been waiting for a chance to gain revenge, but the risk has not been clear for games until this week.

Janesville and Racine are the strongest polo fives in the state, and a contest between the two is every year in an exciting combat, for a deep rivalry exists between them. The Racine team has been filling a weekly schedule for the last two months and are in excellent condition for a hard contest. On the following week plans are being made for a basketball contest between the Janesville Cardinals and a university five.

These figures have only recently been given out after an interested public had long speculated on the exact sum the well-known Dutchman was paid. Years ago at the time of the war between the new American and the National league it was rumored that a sum had been contributed by all of the teams to keep Wagner Dreyfus, the Pittsburgh magnate, has recently said that there was not a bit of truth in the rumor. At the time Wagner was as much annoyed by the reports of his signing with the American league as where the National league magnates, and meet-Larry was transferred to the Giants toward the end of the last season and at that time the St. Louis people tried to shove the responsibility of the bonus over into the New York hands. Alva Miller and Eddie Sentry fought a fast and vicious preliminary bout not so very long ago. To watch the two of them at it one would little suppose that they were friends. And yet a few hours before Sentry had been blowing Miller to the first square meal the Miller had for some while. Miller blew into Pittsburgh and hooked up with Sentry, who offered to buy a meal. When came to settling the reckoning Sentry found that the Miller's money in another pair of trousers, but he left his watch for security till he could return and pay the bill. A few hours later they met in the ring and all thought of debts and on so forth were forgotten. "I'm going to try for a k. o. Eddie," said Miller to Sentry and Sentry told Miller to go ahead and do his durnest. They fought like the bitterest enemies throughout the fight. After the fight they were pals again.

AMUSEMENTS

EVEN SHEEHAN'S BONES ARE FOUND TO BE MUSICAL.

Throat Specialist Also Says That Vocal Tube is Longer Than That of Any Other Actor.

Dontor Jay Pitts, who recently examined the throat of Joseph F. Sheehan, the famous tenor who will be heard as star in his own company which comes to the Myers Theatre on Wednesday, Jan. 21st, declares that he is unique among tenors, as his singing machine complies to a greater extent than that of any other tenor he has examined, the physical characteristics necessary for the perfect production of vocal sounds of almost unlimited volume.

In this examination Doctor Pitts found that Sheehan's vocal tube is one-half inch longer than that of any other tenor record. This, he says, accounts for his extraordinary compass, pitch and volume. His vocal chords are one-eighth of an inch longer than the ordinary and possess extraordinary vibratile qualities. Sheehan's bones are more resonant than those of other persons. Tap one of his knuckles smartly with the forefinger and it gives a higher pitch and more resonant tone than that of any other person examined. The phenomenal capacity and power of his chest is shown by his ability to push a grand piano several inches by the mere expansion of his chest. When the tenor is singing C sharp, his vocal chords attain the phenomenal rate of 500 vibrations a second, finally Sheehan's epiglottis is so formed that it acts as a unique sounding board.

It seems impossible that anyone would complain of hearing Sheehan sing too much, but this has been the case. It appears that the famous tenor has a penchant for arising at an unearthly hour in the morning and running the scales in his room. The result is that he arouses everyone within ear shot, which in the case of Sheehan means nearly everyone in the hotel.

THE BALLOT

By GEORGE FITCH, Author of "At Good Old Sivaah."

THE BALLOT is the weapon of liberty. Like other weapons, it is most dangerous to its owner when it isn't loaded.

So long as the common citizen keeps charging indignantly around with his ballot in his hand he is treated with fear and respect by all. But when he lingers at home on election day and toasts his toes at the fire while the hosts of evil hunt for votes with automobiles, his ballot withers and his power with it. And when he calls at the city hall to ask why he has been assessed for a pavement which has been put in an alderman's pocket he receives the rude guffaw to say nothing of a punch in the back from a policeman's club.

The ballot makes our president and governors and congressmen and aldermen and justices of the peace and poundmasters. However, the ballot is not entirely to blame for what happens. A ballot must be used with intelligence just like a hair brush or garden hose or a collar button. If some men put as much brains and careful thought into voting as they do into pushing a lawnmower the nation would get better results.

The ballot is the precious possession of every freeborn citizen. No matter how small or insignificant the citizen may be, the ballot makes him, for one day at least, as big as any other citizen. For months and years he may suffer his wrongs without sympathy or remedy. Haughty officeholders may flout him and there is naught for him to do save write to the complaint corner of his daily newspaper. But on election day he rises a man of might, takes his ballot from its casket and as he walks down the street stepping over trolley wires and small buildings the potentates of yesterday bow down before him and ask him with anxious hospitality to have a drink. Until he casts his ballot he is a giant. Small wonder that so many men do not vote until 5 p. m. Politicians stand in fear before the man who uses his ballot at elections as if it were a cutlass, and relentlessly mows down the unworthy officeholder. But they only laugh at the man who sits at home on his ballot like a setting hen year after year trying to hatch out good government.

BUSINESS OFFICE OPEN SATURDAY EVENINGS.

WAITING ROOM AT GAZETTE OFFICE.

For the convenience of the public the Gazette office can be used as a waiting room for street cars. Seats are provided and you are welcome to make use of the office as you please.

WEATHER FORECAST.

It will probably continue unsettled and cloudy, probably with snow flurries to night and Wednesday. It will be colder, falling to 10 degrees by morning. Brisk northerly winds will prevail.

THE HOSPITAL.

The Gazette has refrained from saying anything editorially about the campaign for the hospital, which was launched today, after due preliminary work, because public sentiment has been so much divided as to the advisability of the movement, but after reading the financial statement published last evening, which seems to be a candid statement of conditions, the paper feels warranted in saying that the efforts now being made to pay off the indebtedness and put the hospital on a good financial basis, are entitled to every encouragement.

One of the objections, advanced perhaps more than any other, is that it is a Catholic institution, and the money contributed is for the benefit of the Catholic church. This objection is so far-fetched that it hardly seems worthy of serious attention, and yet it influences some people.

The hospital to all intents and purposes belongs to the city of Janesville. It will never be moved out of the city and it is safe to assume that it will never be used for any other purpose.

It was built through the energy and untiring zeal of the Sisters of Mercy, and has been operated by them, in spite of discouragements, because they are the only organization engaged in this kind of work. They deserve a "God bless you" and not criticism.

The hospital is modern, and up-to-date in all of its equipment. It is large enough to meet the demands of the city and surrounding country, and it is safe to say that no case will be turned away because of poverty.

A couple of laboring men called at the office, the other day, and said, we would be glad to pay one dollar a month indefinitely for the support of the hospital, if we could be assured of care, in case of need. While the Gazette is not authorized to talk for the management, the paper believes that the mission of the hospital includes just such cases.

It will be noticed that the subscriptions cover a period of two years. This would indicate that all classes of people will have an opportunity to contribute and there will be no favoritism.

Another objection is that Messrs. Wells and Whittier, the men who are conducting the campaign, are working for a commission. What if they are? If they raise the money they are entitled to pay.

They come to the people with an idea and a plan which produces results. The Carville Methodist church employed a financial agent from Buffalo and paid him well to raise sixteen thousand dollars, when the church was dedicated.

Fifty thousand dollars, of course, is a good deal of money to raise, but two years is a good long time, and if everybody lends a hand there will be nothing burdensome about it. Don't you think it's the right thing to do?

DOUBLING CORN CROP.

President W. D. Lewis of the farmers' union in Texas, is urging the agriculturists of his state to exert their energies to double the corn crop of the Lone Star state. What is true of Texas is true of Wisconsin. It has been demonstrated that with good seed corn, with proper care and cultivation, crops over a hundred bushels to an acre can be grown in Wisconsin and that the average corn crop for the state is forty-one bushels to the acre. The boys who took part in the Gazette contest are reaping a benefit from their crops and if they have cared for their seed corn, should have made considerable money by its sale. Wisconsin is a corn state just as much as Texas so it is interesting to note what the Texas authorities say of Texas.

"It requires only a casual survey of Texas agricultural resources and statistics to see that the acreage sown in corn last year could be easily multiplied by two. It is because that fact is so obvious, and because failing to take full advantage of its opportunities is so costly to Texas, that Mr. Lewis proposes to make a campaign among the farmers in support of his views. Not only does he intend to travel through the state personally for the purpose of advocating a larger corn crop, but he promises to instruct every farmers' union lecturer in the state to take part in the movement.

"There is opportunity for interesting and not altogether unprofitable speculation in this step on the part of a man of wide practical experience in agriculture. It has almost become trite to say that the soil of the United States is not cultivated any year in any state to any point bordering even remotely on its acreage capacity. In fact it has become known as a discreditable fact that the farmers of the United States are getting smaller crop returns from the soil than the farmers of the older countries of the world, even when the acreage cultivated is the same. Suppose that campaigns such as that now proposed for Texas were instituted and successfully prosecuted in all the states of the American Union, North, South, East and West, is it to be imagined that there would be a shortage of foodstuffs anywhere, that the price of foodstuffs would anywhere approach or go beyond the average purchasing power of consumers?

"The Texas episode, like many others, simply serves to confirm in the breasts of many the conviction that the magnificent soil inheritance of the people of the United States is not being put to the best use. The almost authoritative declaration that the corn crop of Texas can be doubled next year carries with it the natural inference that last year the farmers of Texas cultivated only half a corn crop. Assuming this condition for all crops and for all states, it is easy to see how the matter stands, and how unsatisfactory it should be to a right-thinking people."

HELP!

Leslie's Weekly in a recent editorial with the above word for its caption, prints the following appeal to the workers of the country to urge fair play for the railroads. They say:

"Workers in every shop! Do you want the steel and iron mills to keep running? Of course you do. Then urge the Interstate Commerce Commission to give the railroads fair play. They stand ready to spend $2,000,000 a day for the next five years, for work and material urgently required. They cannot do it unless you help. The cost of material and wages is advancing and the income from traffic diminishing. Increase the income! Help!

"Merchants! Do you want your stores filled, your counters crowded, and your bookkeepers busy? Then keep the factories busy and the pay envelopes filed. This will keep your cash registers singing all day long. Help!

"Railroad employees! Do you want higher wages and lighter hours? Then make common cause with your employer who is fighting for a chance to live. Demand that the Interstate Commerce Commission give him that chance or let the commission be abolished. It is your fight as much as anybody's. Help!

"Farmers! Do you want the best prices for your products? You get them only when wages are high, workmen busy, railroads prosperous and factories running night and day. Help!

"Workmen, merchants, railroad men, bankers and farmers! Do you all want prosperity? You can have it. Make your choice between the statesmen who build up and the demagogues who tear down. Help!

"And remember that a demagogue never filled a pay envelope."

GOVERNMENT RULES STOPS MINE LOSSES

Washington, Jan. 20.—Every hundred million short tons of coal produced in the United States in 1912 cost 429 lives in mine accidents, or a total of 2,660 lives for a production of 500,000,000 short tons of coal, according to a report just issued by the Bureau of Mines, Department of the Interior. This loss of life, in proportion to the number of millions of tons mined, 4.29 per cent, is the smallest in the records available at the bureau. In 1907 it soared to 6.93 per cent.

The actual number of lives lost in 1912 was less than in any previous year since 1886, when 2,116 men lost their lives in and around coal mines. In 1907 the number of deaths reached 3,197. Yet, with a smaller loss of life, the production of coal in 1912 was the greatest in the country's history.

In figure of deaths but the bureau counts a man who dies within eighteen months of the time of the accident as having been "fatally hurt," which makes the figures for 1912 a little incomplete. About 1,600 men engaged in mining, 23.15 were killed in 1912, and this is the lowest proportion since 1889, when 3.07 men were killed out of each thousand.

"This general improvement," says the report, "has been brought about by a combination of causes, the principal one of which has been more efficient and effective mine inspection on the part of the state mining departments. This has been supplemented throughout the country, supplemented by greater care on the part of both the operators and miners."

The investigative and educational work of the Bureau of Mines has kept both the operator and the miner alive to the various dangers connected with coal mining and has shown what precautions should be taken to avoid these dangers."

The report declares, however, that a still greater increase in the number of killed and injured if proper care will be exercised by operators, superintendents and by the miners themselves will result.

The Evening Chit-Chat

BY RUTH CAMERON

WHY IS BLUE MONDAY?

"I DO hate Monday," the Little Stenographer Lady said to me the other day. "It's so hard to get back into the routine. Everything drags, everything goes wrong on Monday. Other days I am often surprised when five o'clock comes, but Monday it seems as if the clocks had stopped. Sometimes I almost wish there weren't any break in the week. It's so hard to get settled down again."

I think most of us working girls have often felt toward Monday as the Little Stenographer Lady does. The familiar phrase "Blue Monday" attests the universality of this state of mind.

It certainly is hard to get back into the routine after a break. Early rising is doubly repugnant to us after Sunday morning's luxurious laziness. Concentration of mind is doubly difficult to accomplish after Sunday's relaxation, dull details are doubly distasteful after Sunday's freedom.

But it is entirely a fact that we have had a break which makes Monday a day disliked. Aren't there other considerations that make up the color scheme of blue Monday?

For one thing, we haven't the keen anticipation of approaching freedom that brightens the last two or three days of the week. As a child intensely disliked ward that day of school sessions to come, so the adult often enjoyed Friday quite as much as Saturday, for on Friday rested the golden haze of anticipation.

But it seems to me that the most potent factor which goes to make Monday blue is the way we spend our Sundays.

In the first place we antagonize our stomach by entirely changing our time for eating. The stomach is accustomed to handle a few hours later, instead of the light noon lunch of a weekday, we present it with a very hearty meal to digest, and to cap our dinner, the light lunch which used to be considered sufficient for Sunday night (in my childhood it consisted chiefly of crackers and milk for all of us, with pie for the grown folks) is gradually developing into a hearty supper.

Then, besides over-eating, a good many of us under-exercise on Sunday. What wonder that between these two offenses the system is upset?

What wonder that on Monday our outlook is clouded, or that intellect is clouded and our energy decreased by the poison of improperly digested food? Again, while some people under-exercise, others try to crowd into Sunday the occupations with which their friends, who are not tied down to daily work, fill a whole week. They crowd every moment of that day which should be above all things a day of rest. Some of them include a visit to some fashionable church among their activities; others have not time for even that concession to the Lord's Day.

The religious aspect of the case I'm not going to try to discuss. My own belief is that men and women are the better for at least one visit to a house of worship on Sunday. Worship is good for us; the momentary suspension of our material activities, and the resulting realization that there are other things in life, is good for us; the peace and tranquility of church is good for us. But putting the religious considerations aside, and looking at the matter from the efficiency viewpoint, a sabbath, quieter Sabbath will certainly give us a happier, more efficient week.

Domestic Science Department

SCIENTIFIC KNOWLEDGE OF FOOD VALUES IS NECESSARY. We eat for efficiency. It is possible to decide intelligently how the money available for food should be spent and distributed among different food materials.

Experience has taught us many things, but the accumulated experience is only a hazy, indistinct knowledge. It is only when interpreted by definite scientific knowledge that it means the same over and over again. We certainly grow gray by trying to do nothing but the same old thing repeatedly.

Until lately we thought a housekeeper could not even be told the exact scientific use of a teaspoonful of baking soda in relation to a pint of sour milk. But now, much progress has been made in the last few years with clear, definite information about food and food values for the housekeeper, but I am sorry to say she has often been a little slow in availing herself of the knowledge she needs.

Much has to be overcome in the feeling that mothers or grandmothers should know this and it is good enough for us; again, much of the necessary information for them is still locked up in technical terms and the ordinary housekeeper, even though she be well educated in all else she does in her home, has not time to devote to the study of it and get the key.

In every city, however, lectures and practical demonstrations are given on this subject and many others, bearing directly on the well being of the family and the home. Sometimes these are without charge and again a nominal fee is attached. This latter is a good thing, for it tends to make the housekeeper feel that she is certainly availing herself of the study of this most valuable subject until she has a definite knowledge of foods and their uses in the body.

What is a general way that food nourishes us and makes us strong; and yet if every housekeeper could make an analysis of her table three times a day, she would be shocked at the lack of building the body. (2) furnishing heat; (3) giving sustaining power to work.

The first—"building the body"—is exercised not only in a growing child where his food must be transformed into bones, muscles, blood and nerve tissue, but in the adult, after growth has stopped, the constant waste of the body tissue must be repaired by food.

The body must be built up by its own elements. For instance, the average man has been estimated to contain the following: Water, 108 pounds; protein matter, eleven pounds; protein matter, 29.75 pounds; fat, five pounds; carbohydrates, one-fourth pound. From this one can see that it is only through certain foods having these same elements that the body can derive its growth and energy so that the internal as well as the external organs may work.

A six to nine-year-old child's breakfast on a cold winter morning would be: Four steamed prunes with juice but no sugar; four tablespoonfuls of cooked whole wheat or oatmeal with milk and cream and one-half teaspoonful of sugar; one whole wheat gem and one-half ounce of butter; one cup of cocoa.

This may be given an adult, increasing it one-fourth, and it will feed muscles and tissues. In fact, if food of the right kind to feed the body of a child at school or the adult in any line of work unless it be entirely out of doors, then increase the amount one-half.

Household Hint

THINGS WORTH KNOWING. A little box of water boiled in the coffee pot twice a week for fifteen minutes sweetens and purifies a tablespoonful of salt and it will help very much.

When in doubt, use your fork, is a pretty fair table rule. The knife, of course, is absolutely tabooed for cutting and spreading. The spoon is used only for liquids and soft desserts.

In dipping up soup move the spoon toward the outer edge of the dish. Take the soup from the side of the spoon.

THE TABLE. Sponge Cookies—Beat the yolks of two eggs light and add a cup of sugar. When smooth add the whites beaten to a standing froth, the juice of half a lemon and, with quick, light strokes, a cupful of flour sifted twice with one teaspoonful of baking powder and a little salt. Now work in more flour until you have a rollable dough. Cut into shapes and bake quickly in a floured shallow pan.

Tapioa Cream Soup—Soak two tablespoonfuls of tapioa in a pint of cold water for six or eight hours. Heat a pint of well-seasoned mutton stock to boiling and stir the tapioa into this. Boil until the tapioa is clear, then slowly add a pint of scalding milk, in which a pinch of soda has been dissolved. Season to taste and pour the soup very gradually upon the beaten yolks of three eggs. Turn into a heated tureen and serve.

Chop Pie—Trim two pounds of tender chops by cutting away the skin, fat and two inches of the rib bone. With the refuse trim things make a gravy by cooking slowly three hours in just enough water to cover them. Let it cool, skim off all the fat, season highly, thicken well with browned flour, boil up once and again let it cool. Arrange the chops on the inside of a bake dish, overlapping one another. Arrange in the center space with chopped mushrooms, a chopped tomato, six small button onions and a pint of green peas. Pour in the gravy; cover with a good crust, make a slit in the middle and bake, covered, half an hour. Then brown.

Baked Orange Pudding—Make a batter of two eggs, a cupful of milk, a tablespoonful of melted butter and about three cupfuls of flour into which has been sifted two tablespoonfuls of baking powder. Peel, seed and cut into bits four oranges; beat these into the batter and bake in a grease pudding dish in a hot oven. Serve with hot orange sauce.

Orange Sauce—Rub together five tablespoonfuls of butter and a cupful of granulated sugar. Put these into a sauce pan and pour upon them half a cupful of boiling water, beat the stiffened whites of three eggs, the juice of two oranges and half a lemon. Beat with an egg beater until very foamy and serve.

Chestnuts With Whipped Cream—Shell and boil Spanish chestnuts, remove the skins and rub the nuts through a colander. Sweeten to taste and beat to a soft paste with a little cream. Form the mixture into a pyramid in the center of a chilled platter and heap sweetened whipped cream around it.

Lemon Sauce—Cook for fifteen minutes one cupful of sugar with three tablespoonfuls of boiling water, a half teaspoonful of grated lemon peel and the strained juice of a lemon. Take from the fire and pour gradually upon the beaten yolks of three eggs. Set in boiling water and stir until the eggs are set, but not until they begin to harden.

Apple Sauce—Stew peeled and sliced apples until they are so soft that they can be rubbed through a colander. There should be a pint of this apple sauce. Set aside until cold. Beat the whites of three eggs to a stiff froth and into this beat apples by the spoonful, alternately with a cupful of powdered sugar, then very stiff, add a teaspoonful of lemon juice, turn into chilled glasses, heap whipped cream upon the top and serve.

Raised Muffins—One cup of scalded milk, one cup of boiling water, two tablespoonfuls of butter, one-quarter cup of sugar, three-quarters teaspoonful of salt, one-quarter yeast cake, one egg, four cups of flour. Add the butter, sugar and salt to the milk and water when lukewarm and the yeast cake and when dissolved, egg well beaten, and flour; beat thoroughly, cover and let rise over night. In the morning fill buttered muffin rings two-thirds full; bake thirty minutes in a hot oven.

Every Day Talks for Every Day People

BY FRANCES JOYCE KENNEDY.

Is this you? Daily do you endeavor to find out every bit of your neighbor's business, do you aim to know just when the prominent happenings in their family take place? Are you ever on the alert to see who enters the house, and how long they stay, what their business is and if there was really any truth to the rumor (that you helped spread) that the man of the place drank beer NEVER, see him home evenings?

You wonder if there's any foundation to the story that the family who have just moved in on the next street have been divorced, and remarried; she looks so sad you believe a must abuse her—the horrid wretch.

Then there's a family living on your right who live way beyond their means; the children always have candy, they go and go and go, every one of the family, it is as if they were living beyond their income it's rather funny.

That isn't all! One of your neighbor's daughters is to be married in the very near future. The fact that this important event is to occur with out the asking of your opinion hurts you through and through. So, to even things up a bit, you casually remark to a friend that it's a little strange the way the young girl is being married off so quickly. Oh! it isn't what you say that carries the deadly insinuation, it's the uplifted eyebrows, the barely perceptible shrug of the shoulders, that do the damage.

Escalloped dishes, from cold fish or other foods, are ready to serve as soon as they are thoroughly hot.

A glance at the list of quick dishes will tell you if you have the materials at hand, and the regret will be saved that you might have had this or that if "I had only thought."

In the hurry of a quick meal getting one's memory is often faulty and not to be relied upon.

Tomato toast is a delicious quick lunch dish. Omelets of various and sundry kinds are always popular, and if you have a little cold meat which, with a hot sauce like the Mexican or Spanish, will serve as a good main dish.

Oyster stew is a simple dish and quickly made, quite filling, and almost always popular.

Cream toast is one of the staple good old-fashioned dishes. With the addition of cheese it raises its food value.

Baked eggs with creamed potatoes is another way of using less eggs.

A dessert, in a hurry, of preserved or canned peaches with whipped cream, or none at all, with a piece of cake or a cookie, is a good finish to a meal.

Heart and Home Problems

Dear Mrs. Thompson: Will you please give me a formula for reducing flesh? I know of only one fairly sure way of reducing flesh, and that is to reduce your diet and exercise strenuously every day.

You can live on a milk diet, drinking nothing but milk for a number of weeks. This will make you about as thin as a rail, if you can stand the diet.

If you don't want to do that, you can eat food, but only enough to keep you going. In time your stomach will adjust itself to the less amount of food and will not demand as much as it does now.

Without butter, no potatoes or any food containing sugar. Make lemonade, your chief drink (without sugar).

For my part, however, I would rather be fat and strong and happy than have enough to eat, than to be thin and perhaps anemic and bad-tempered. Good nourishing food, and sufficient exercise should keep one in good trim, even though not as slim as fashion prescribes.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: (1) What makes the hair oily? Will applying alcohol to the hair cure it in time? (2) Is it wrong for a fourteen-year-old girl to "mush" with a twenty-year-old boy if she knows him to be an excellent character? The fact that he says he loves me and is going to wait for me until I become of age. He is very nice to me. Do you think he means it, or is he just jilting his girl with me? He doesn't go with other girls. We have known each other for nearly five months. (3) What good does witch hazel do to the face? How often should it be used? (4) How may I wash a silk tie? (5) How may one get over being bashful? (6) LA PETITE.

(1) The formula for oily hair is two ounces alcohol, two ounces witch hazel, fourteen grains resorcin. Use daily, rubbing into the scalp. Do not eat greasy foods.

(2) He is only having fun with you. A man who "mushes" with a girl soon gets tired of her. If you have known him only five months you don't know anything at all about him. I should think he would be ashamed to make love to a child of your age.

(3) Witch hazel is used for open pores. Put it on several times a day for this purpose.

(4) In gasoline. Keep it away from fire.

(5) By not thinking of one's self, and by trying to be interesting to others.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: I am a girl of seventeen and keep company with a boy of nineteen. He is very nice, indeed, to me, and has often told me he cared for me but me, but nearly every time he comes he only tells me to kiss him. I think very much of him for he is so nice, to me and I would hate to give him up, but don't like to do this way. Do you really think he likes me? I am so doubtful. Please tell me what you would do or tell him if you were in my place.

KITTY.

I am sure you are a dear little girl, Kitty. You have done quite right not to let him kiss you. Probably if you had let him he would not be so anxious to be going with you now. Boys are like that, you know. That is, the nice ones are. If he isn't nice he'll get mad at you and stay away, but you'd only lose him. Little sooner by refusing the kisses.

Just tell him that you are both too young for such childishness, and that you have given up kissing any more until you are engaged to be married.

The neighbors who moved last week lost their home; yes, you got it straight, they did. That was why they moved. No wonder they could not win out the way that woman dressed and the way they both took to each other. Probably they'd learn that a home could not be obtained by people that were regular trotters. They always were so recent; you're glad they're gone.

In speaking of yourself you lay great stress on the fact that you do not talk about your neighbors; that you understand perfectly that some day you will be forced to render an account for every idle word; that you make it a practice to speak civilly and say something kind or to keep still.

Listening to you talking so sincerely in that strain your hearers would never accuse you of hypocrisy, yet hypocrisy is a trait that one can safely say lies deep-rooted in the heart of a person who in meeting another has the friendliest, most sincere greetings for one, and after leaving them will calmly proceed to verbally shed them to pieces, to the absent one's discredit—rest assured of this.

Did you ever think what a fine thing it would be if we would all say in our friends' absence only the things we would say in their presence? Thinking so, what if we would all decide to have it come to pass. Are you a gossip or an anti-gossip?

Time Heals All. Time obliterates the fiction of opinions and confirms the decisions of nature.—Cicero.

ECZEMA SPREAD ALL OVER BODY

Began on Cheeks With Pimples. Itched Badly. Caused Disfigurement. Had to Put Mittens on Him. Used Cuticura Soap and Ointment. Eczema Left Him.

Roxbury, Ohio. — "When my little boy was two weeks old he began breaking out on his cheeks. The eczema began just with pimples and they seemed to itch so badly he would scratch his face and cause a matter to run. Wherever that matter would touch, it would cause another pimple until it spread all over his body. It caused disfigurement while it lasted. He had fifteen places on one arm and his head had several. The deepest places on his cheeks were as large as a silver dollar on each side. He was so restless at night we had to put mittens on him to keep him from scratching them with his finger nails. He could not sleep because I put those mittens on which would not allow him to scratch and then he would wake up and be cross. If he got a little too warm at night it seemed to hurt badly.

"We tried a treatment and he didn't get any better. He had the eczema about three weeks when we began using Cuticura Soap and Ointment. I bathed him at night with the Cuticura Soap and spread the Cuticura Ointment on and the eczema left." (Signed) Mrs. John White, Mar. 19, 1913.

Cuticura Soap and Ointment do so much for poor complexions, red, rough hands, and dry, thin and falling hair, and cost so little, that it is almost criminal not to use them. Sold everywhere. Sample of each mailed free, with 32-p. book on the skin and scalp. Address post-card "Cuticura, Dept. T, Boston."

Men who shave and shampoo with Cuticura Soap will find it best for skin and scalp.

MISS IDA OLSEN WEDS

ALMAHAR HARSTAD SUNDAY

At the parsonage of the Bethlehem Lutheran church, at two o'clock, January 18, occurred the marriage of Almahar Harstad and Miss Ida Olsen, both of the town of Beloit. The Rev. J. N. Brown performed the ceremony. The young couple were attended by Harry Harstad and Miss Hilda Olsen, brother and sister of the bride and groom. Both Mr. and Mrs. Harstad are well known and popular young people of the neighborhood and have a host of friends, who extend hearty congratulations. After a wedding trip to Madison they will make their home for the present with Mr. Harstad's parents, Mr. and Mrs. H. M. Harstad.

A miscellaneous shower was given Mr. and Mrs. Harstad Jan. 11, at the home of Mr. Harstad. Those present were relatives and friends from Avon and Orfordville.

W. J. Miller of Crookston, Minn., was a caller at the home of L. J. McCrea Friday.

A very pleasant family gathering was held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Eddy Sunday afternoon, the occasion being in honor of the fifty-ninth birthday of Mrs. Eddy's mother, Mrs. Albert Deitloff. Those present were: Mrs. Albert Deitloff and son, Otto, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Eddy and children, Mr. and Mrs. L. C. Eddy, Albert and Frank Eddy, and C. C. Cunningham.

DYNAMITE BLAST CRACKS CEMENT PILES IN RIVER

One pound stick of dynamite was sufficient to crack the cement piles in the river, and the remainder of the foundations were demolished. A hole was drilled into the center of the piles and each pile was cracked so that their removal will be an easy matter. Although the explosion did not throw the cement over ten feet in the air, the police kept the crowds that had assembled to watch the work clear from the bridge. There are eight of these piles. Yesterday afternoon the wire cable used with the derrick to remove the piling at the east side of the river broke beneath the heavy strain and caused several hours' delay in the work.

Rock County Contributes to New Capital, University, Normal Schools, and General Fund This Year.

Rock county will pay into the state treasury in state taxes during the month of February the sum of $232,082.22 against $136,996.33 paid in February of 1913.

Declaring that the tax-payers may be interested to know what the state does with the money, State Treasurer Henry Johnson has sent out an explanation of the figures for Rock county, using the tax settlements for the years 1913 and 1914 as comparisons. Mr. Johnson's statement will be read with interest. It is as follows:

It may be of interest to the tax-payers to know what the state does with this money. It will undertake to explain where the money goes by using the tax settlements for the years 1913 and 1914 as a comparison. Interest on certificates of indebtedness. In 1913, $4,559.43; in 1914, $4,611.23.

This is interest on $2,251,000.00 borrowed by the state from the school fund during the war, and which goes to the school fund.

Free high schools. In 1913, $4,340.23; in 1914, $5,127.37.

Graded schools. In 1913, $3,472.31; in 1914, $5,852.99.

The above amounts are apportioned by the state superintendent of schools and is paid back to the schools in your county.

New capital. In 1913, none; in 1914, $13,159.33.

Highway tax. In 1913, $10,127.57; in 1914, $43,287.18.

The above highway tax is your county's share of the $1,500,000.00 appropriated by the legislature for state aid, and will be paid by your county treasurer to the state treasurer in February, and will then be apportioned by the state highway commissioner and paid back to the several towns of your county.

General purpose tax. In 1913, none; in 1914, $43,397.44.

The budget adopted by the legislature for the year 1914, for the state, is approximately $15,000,000.00, only $12,000,000.00, in order to make up this difference your county must pay the above amount as its share.

State university. None $22,903.43.

Normal schools. None $4,623.61.

Common schools $51,770.44 $5,566.20.

School apportionment. In 1913, $4,771.62.

The above amount is what is known as the "mill tax" and is computed on the valuation of the county, and is apportioned by the state superintendent of schools, according to the number of children of school age in the county.

You will notice that the above county will pay $10,794.67 more than it receives.

Charitable and penal tax. In 1913, $4,898.79; in 1914, $5,753.38.

This tax is a charge for inmates at the several state institutions.

School district loans. In 1913, $1,624.46; in 1914, $608.20.

Reassessment Janesville. In 1913, $2,851.55; in 1914, $1,794.06.

The above is for interest and principal on loans made by the state to school districts in the above county.

These loans are made out of the trust funds, interest rate 3 1/2% per annum. This cannot be considered state tax although it appears in the settlement.

The above county receives for the year of 1913 $10,794.67; in 1914, $10,930.60.

There is a difference in the two years' tax levy which can best be explained by saying that no tax was raised last year for the new capital, state university, and normal schools.

The regular tax levy for these institutions to the extent of $2,000,000.00 was taken out of the general fund, and is known as "tax remission."

This, however, left the general fund in such a condition that a tax levy necessarily had to be made this year.

A cupboard shower is one of the latest school activities.

In Grand Rapids the mothers of some of the children recently gave to one of the schools a set of dishes and considerable food material as a matter of encouragement to Miss Ada Shafer, who has won a great reputation in the city on account of lunches served to the children in her room during cold and stormy weather for many winters past. Let's have some more "showers" and a lot of them all over the state!—Wisconsin Journal of Education.

SOCIETIES CONVE

—Programs Are Short.

The regular meetings of the Forum and Rusk Lyceum Literary clubs of the high school met last evening. Both societies shortened up their programs to make way for the transaction of much business, which was necessary to be carried through with last evening.

The Forum had planned a classical program for last night, but only two members scheduled to take part were present and a postponement was made. John Ferguson spoke on "Habit," which "Casey's Life" was given by Richard O'Brien.

A stringent measure, brought up and passed by the Forum, follows: Any member who shall fall below an average of 75 percent in his studies for two successive terms shall become an ex-member of the society, and cannot be reinstated unless by a request from the critic or by the school superintendent.

The Rusk meeting was purely business. Prof. J. T. Shearer, critic of the Forum, took charge of their meeting for a time. The Rusk are in want of a critic, and President Cummings, with the aid of a committee, looking strenuously for some faculty member to act in that capacity for the remainder of the year. How to Make the Best Cough Remedy at Home

A Family Supply at Small Cost, and Fully Guaranteed.

Make a plain syrup by mixing one pint of granulated sugar and 1/2 pint of warm water and stir for 2 minutes.

Put 2 1/2 ounces of pure Pinex (fifty cents' worth) in a pint bottle, and fill it up with the Sugar Syrup. This gives you a family supply of the best cough syrup at a saving of $2. It never spoils.

Take a teaspoonful every one, two or three hours.

The effectiveness of this simple remedy is surprising. It seems to take hold almost instantly, and will usually conquer an ordinary cough in 24 hours. It tones up the jaded appetite and is just laxative enough to be helpful in constipation, and is a pleasing taste.

Also excellent for bronchial trouble, bronchial asthma, whooping cough and spasmodic croup.

This method of making cough remedy with Pinex and Sugar Syrup (or strained honey) is now used in more homes than any other cough syrup.

This reason why it is often imitated, though never successfully. If you try it, use only genuine Pinex, which is a most valuable concentrated compound of Norway white pine extract, and is rich in guaiacal and other natural healing pine elements. Other preparations will not work in this combination.

A guaranty of absolute satisfaction, or money promptly refunded, goes with the preparation. Your druggist has Pinex and will get it for you. If not, send to The Pinex Co., Ft. Wayne, Ind.

Watch Carefully the Child's Diet

Mothers are often unconsciously very careless about the diet of their children, forcing all to eat the same foods. The fact is that all foods do not agree alike with different persons. Hence, avoid what seems to constipate the child or to give it indigestion, and urge it to take more of what is quickly digested.

If the child shows a tendency to constipation it should immediately be given a mild laxative to help the bowels. By this is not meant a physic or purgative for these should never be given to children, nor anything like salts, pills, etc. What the child requires is simply a small dose of the gentlest of medicines, such as Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, which, in the opinion of thousands of watchful mothers, is the ideal remedy for any child showing a tendency to constipation. So many things can happen to a constipated child that care is necessary. Colds, piles, headaches, sleeplessness, and many other annoyances that children should not have can usually be traced to constipation.

Everyone likes Syrup Pepsin as it is very pleasant to the taste. It is also mild and non-gripping and free from injurious ingredients.

Families wishing to try a free sample bottle can obtain it, postpaid by addressing Dr. W. B. Caldwell, 419 Washington St., Monticello, Ill. A postal card with your name and address on it will do.

WOMAN WOULD NOT GIVE UP

Though Sick and Suffering; At Last Found Help in Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Richmond, Pa. — "When I started taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound I was in a dreadfully rundown state of health, had internal troubles, and was so extremely nervous and prostrated that if I had given in to my feelings I would have been in bed. As it was I had hardly strength at times to be on my feet and what I did do was by a great effort. I could not sleep at night and of course felt very bad in the morning, and had a steady headache.

"After taking the second bottle I noticed that the headache was not so bad, I rested better, and my nerves were stronger. I continued its use until it made a new woman of me, and now I can hardly realize that I am able to do so much as I do. Whenever I know any woman in need of a good medicine I highly praise Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound." Mrs. FRANK CLARK, 3146 N. Tulip St., Richmond, Pa.

Broadway Jones

From the Play of George M. Cohan

By EDWARD MARSHALL

With Photographs from Scenes in the Play

Copyright, 1914, by G. W. DeMunnich Company

"Yes; unless you tell me within the next 24 hours that you've reconsidered all this rot, and that you're going to fight things out the way a real man should, I'll never speak to you again!"

"Bob!" Broadway actually paled. "That goes; is it getting me anything—this giving you advice? Will it put a dollar in or out of my pocket whether you marry that old woman or not? You're nothing to me except a friend and a pal; but I don't want to see you do something you'll regret for all the balance of your life. I'm sorry you're in trouble, and there isn't anything I won't do to help you. I'll go the limit in everything I've got. But, if you don't give up all idea of that marriage, never expect the friendship of a man who has any decency or self-respect."

"That's all I've got to say. Now, I'll be going."

CHAPTER VI

Broadway hurried to the angry and disgusted man and put his hand upon his arm. He was rather badly fussed by this uncompromising attitude.

"Wait a minute, Bob," he urged. "Don't go off like that. That was an awful thing you just said to me. I—I had a wild night. Give me a chance to think."

"All right," said Wallace, not very graciously. "Go ahead—think! It's about time you began to think."

He sank into a chair, his gloomy face regarding Broadway with small favor, his angry fingers tapping on a table top.

Broadway was very nervous. Realization was becoming vivid of the fact that he had not been wholly admirable in his general course.

"Don't you suppose I know it's a shabby thing to do?" he urged. "But, great Scott! look at the fix I'm in!"

Wallace made a gesture of negation. It was clear that he refused to grant that anything could excuse his friend's course with the widow.

"You're not sore at me, Bob, are you?" Broadway pleaded.

"I've said my say. You've heard my opinion."

"Do you think everyone will feel that way about it?"

"Of course."

Broadway was distressed beyond his feeble power of explanation. Pacing up and down, he moaned:

"If it wasn't for those debts! If it wasn't for the bills I owe!"

"You don't know the exact amount!"

"No."

"Why haven't you added them up?"

"I haven't had time. I've been—too busy."

"Doing what?"

"Now, don't give me the third degree, please! Look here! I'm so nervous that I'm trembling like a leaf."

"Where are those bills?"

"In the little room, in my desk."

"Would you mind if I looked them over?"

"No; I wish you would. You will do that, Bob?" He was as eager as if examination of them by his business-headed friend would mark each one receipted.

"But, say, Bob, suppose I take your advice and call this thing off. What am I going to say to Mrs. Gerard?"

"You won't have to say anything. I'll handle her."

"Well, what would you say to her?"

"Will you please leave that to me? Go over there and sit down. Do some more thinking. You've got many a think coming to you, young fellow! I'm going to see how much you owe the world."

And Broadway did exactly as he ordered, looking after him almost as a child might after some one had assumed full charge of tangled, juvenile affairs.

Suddenly he realized that some outstanding bills would not be among the mass which Wallace was examining. He would have to get them in. He wished to know the worst, now that he was at it. He went over to the telephone and called up a certain famous restaurant. After he had told the manager to make out his bill for the previous evening's entertainment and let him know the total, he sat waiting, with the receiver glued tight to one ear, and, when Rankin entered, called him to him.

"You'd better look around for another job, Rankin."

The butler almost fainted. "Hasn't my service been satisfactory, sir?"

"Oh, yes; everything has been all right; but, you see, Rankin, I'm going to leave town. I—er—expect to do a lot of traveling."

He gazed at Rankin anxiously. He hoped this would be easy. The worry on his face and the cramped position necessary to listening at the telephone and watching the butler closely gave him a pitiful expression. He looked as if in pain.

When Rankin said, respectfully, that if Mr. Jones was traveling he should like to travel with him, Jackson was annoyed.

"I'd like to have you, Rankin," he said weakly, "but, you see, I expect to locate in—er—in Japan, and I've got to have some one who understands the language."

That was a power. He congratulated himself. That would settle Rankin and get rid of him with no hard feelings. He was really rather fond of Rankin.

But no! "I speak Japanese very well, sir," and the extraordinary butler, with a calm which vouched for his veracity, "I was in service with two Japanese for over five years, and if you think of China, sir, or Russia—"

Fortunately for his master's difficulty maintained composure, two things happened to distract attention. He got his message on the telephone, and the ringing doorbell removed Rankin.

But the young spendthrift's calm was brief. "What's that, again?" he asked the restaurant man anxiously. "Er—what? Twenty-three hundred and twenty-three dollars?"

The what? Oh, the vintage! Is that so? Er—no, not at all. Twenty-three hundred is all right. It would be the same to me if you had said—er—twenty-three thousand."

Having hung up the receiver, he sagged down in his chair disconsolately.

"Twenty-three! Twenty-three!" he murmured. "And—er—the butler speaks Japanese! I can't win a bet! I'll never forget this day!"

He rose and paced the room, then paused and gazed at the wall calendar.

"The thirteenth of the month! No wonder."

He threw the offending Harrison Fisher girl into the grate, as Rankin, returning, announced a persistent visitor who had declared that he would wait when he had been assured that Mr. Jones was out. Jackson examined the man's card.

"Peter Pembroke!" he mused, puzzled. "Where have I heard the name before?"

"He appears to be a man of some importance, sir."

"And he knows I'm in?"

Rankin nodded.

"Oh, well; bring him in. It can't be any worse." He called to Wallace.

"Bob! Oh, Bob! When you get that total add twenty-three hundred and twenty-three dollars to it."

"What for?"

"That—vin—tage," Broadway answered, bitterly, as his visitor came in. "Of course you expected me, were his first words. 'My name is Pembroke.'"

Broadway was puzzled. "Expected you?"

"Didn't Judge Spotswood wire you that I'd call?"

"Spotswood?"

"Oh, I know whom you mean, of course. No; he didn't wire."

"That's strange. I talked with him over the long-distance phone less than an hour ago, and he told me he had wired you early this morning."

"No," said Broadway definitely. "I can't understand it."

"Hold on. Rankin did hand me a wire. I didn't read it." Broadway searched the table, then his pockets and finally discovered the crumpled and unopened telegram snuggled next his watch.

"You have my deepest sympathy, Mr. Jones," said Pembroke unctuously, as he was tearing off the envelope and.

"Have I?" Jackson was surprised.

"You must certainly have, sir. I knew your uncle very well. A fine and able man."

"Um? Er—yes. He is abroad."

Pembroke nodded with an unctuous rapidly increasing. "Yes. How sad that it should happen while he was among mere strangers!"

Jackson looked at him, not comprehending in the least, and then turned his attention to the neglected telegram. It read:

"Cable from Mr. Graham, London, England, announcing your uncle's demise, received late last night. His last will and testament made prior to his sailing places you in possession of the estate. His entire fortune, his business, his every earthly possession he leaves unconditionally to you, his nephew and only heir. Shall I come to New York, or expect you here? Pembroke will call on you today. Answer at once."

Broadway scarcely had the strength with which to raise his head after he had read this mighty news. So his uncle had relented at the end!

"Great heavens!"

"I'm awfully sorry for you, young man," said Pembroke sympathetically. Jackson was surprised. Evidently the man knew nothing of the treatment which his uncle had invariably given him while he still lived. "You are?"

"Ah, yes; but it is something through which we must all go in this life."

"What? Go through all he had? Never! I'll never go through all of that if I once really get it."

"He was worth his weight in gold."

"Great Heavens!"

said Pembroke, still sympathetically.

"How much did it total, do you know?" asked Broadway practically.

"That I can't say. We offered him twelve hundred thousand for his business and good-will less than two months ago. The proposition still holds good, Mr. Jones. We stand ready to close the deal in forty-eight hours. I—er—realize that in your time of trouble and grief it is hardly right to discuss business, but it is vitally important that we bring the matter to a closing point by Saturday noon, as we are considering, at the same time, the purchasing of the Sprucecroft company. Our preference leans toward the Jones gum, but—"

Broadway, wide-eyed and speechless for the moment, gazed at him with dropping jaw. "Wait a minute. Wait a minute. Who is 'we'? Who stands ready with this offer?"

"The company of which I have the honor to be second vice-president, Mr. Jones—the Consolidated Chewing Gum Company of America."

passed him the plate, but the man shook his head and stuck his hands deep into his pockets.

Thereupon our friend, the conductor, stopped, put up his hand as if to jerk the bell cord and said: "Well, you'll have to get on."

A painter of the "impressionist" school is now confined in a lunatic asylum. To all persons who visit his studio he says, "Look here; this is the latest masterpiece of my composition. They look and see nothing but an expanse of bare canvas. They ask, 'What does that represent?'"

"That? Why, that represents the passage of the Children of Israel through the Red Sea."

"Beg pardon, but where is the sea?"

"It has been driven back."

"And where are the Israelites?"

"They have crossed over."

"And the Egyptians?"

"Will be here directly. That's the sort of painting I like—simple, suggestive and unpretentious."

Jackson approached him with an air so serious that it was almost fearful. This change in the aspect of affairs had been so sudden that he was somewhat overcome.

"Hold on. Let me get this clear. Your people want to buy the Jones Gum?"

"We do."

"For twelve hundred and fifty thousand dollars?"

"The top price."

After an instant's pause in which he licked his lips with nervous tongue, and stood poised as if to spring upon his visitor: "Where's the money?"

"I can get my lawyers together within an hour, if you are ready to close the deal."

Jackson was in a fever of excitement. "Well, come on then. Let's get this all over with as quickly as we can."

"Do you mean business?"

"Certainly I mean business," Jackson gazed at him with definite reproach. "Don't I look like a business man?"

He displayed the sack coat Rankin had laid out for him that morning. "Look at this business suit!"

He felt in his pocket, found what he sought and was extremely satisfied. "And I've got a lead pencil and everything. Certainly I mean business."

"You'll sign the articles today?"

"For twelve hundred and fifty thousand dollars I'd sign a murderer's confession!"

Pembroke, who never smiled, looked at his watch. "It's twelve o'clock."

"Is it?"

"We'll meet here at two."

"I'll be right here, waiting."

"Will you shake hands with me?"

"Sure! I'll kiss you if you want me to."

Even this would not divert Pembroke to frivolity. "Mr. Jones, you're doing business with a great company."

Jackson nodded. "You're the greatest company I've ever met."

"Two, then. Don't forget—two!"

"Goodbye! Don't forget—twelve!"

"Good-by!"

Dinner Stories

A street car conductor who had recently become a member of the church was assigned one Sunday morning to take up the collection.

He was a little nervous as he started down the aisle, but that soon wore off and he began to feel almost at home.

There were several children in the front row. Each put in a penny. The persons in the next row also contributed something each.

A big, glum fellow sat alone in the third pew. The new collector passed him the plate, but the man shook his head and stuck his hands deep into his pockets.

Thereupon our friend, the conductor, stopped, put up his hand as if to jerk the bell cord and said: "Well, you'll have to get on."

How Good That MUSTEROLE Feels!

A-a-h! That's delicious relief for these sore muscles, those stiff joints, that lame back.

MUSTEROLE is a clean, white ointment made with the oil of mustard and other home simples.

It does the work of the old-fashioned mustard plaster, minus the plaster and minus the blister!

You simply rub MUSTEROLE on the spot where the pain is—rub it on briskly—and the pain is gone.

No muss, no bother. Just comforting soothing relief—first a gentle glow, then a delightful sense of coolness. And best of all, no blisters like the old-fashioned mustard plaster used to make.

There is nothing like MUSTEROLE

for Sore Throat, Bronchitis, Tonsillitis, Croup, Stiff Neck, Asthma, Neuralgia, Headache, Lumbago, Pains and Aches of the Back or Joints, Sprains, Sore Muscles, Bruises, Chills, Frosted Feet and Colds of the Chest (it prevents Pneumonia).

Doctors and nurses frankly recommend MUSTEROLE. It is used in large hospitals.

At your druggist's, 25c and 50c jars, and a special large hospital size for $2.50.

Accept no substitute. If your druggist cannot supply you, send 25c or 50c, to the MUSTEROLE Company, Cleveland, Ohio, and we will send you a jar, postage prepaid.

CHARLES H. KELLY, Philadelphia, Pa., says: "I have great faith in Musterole; indeed, I have prescribed it for several of my patients this week; it is a very valuable remedy."

There is nothing like MUSTEROLE

Miscellaneous as to authorship, but all good, first-class reading. Owner leaving town and does not care to move them: 588 Gazette.

This ad run in our daily paper received twenty answers before seven o'clock that evening, proving that the residents of our charming little city are studiously inclined.

All of the books were sold at a price that was a bargain to the buyer (as they were all standard works) and that put money into the pocket of the prospective mover.

Had the advertiser been anything but the "up-to-the-minute" young man that he was, he'd have toted his books along with him. As he was going far, this would have been impracticable.

He employed modern methods: Do you! And, if not, why not?
